

Imbuing Resilience Relentlessly

May/June 2019

Students in all CCAs participate annually in various competitions through the National School Games, the Singapore Youth Festival, and other School-Organised competitions. While everyone in the CCA hopes to achieve the best results, the definition of what constitutes “best results” differs from CCA to CCA and individual to individual. For example, some want to improve the SYF results from previous years while other CCAs aspire to achieve a breakthrough in the National Competitions. Individually, students may also gauge their success based on their skill improvement. For our teachers, success entails students pushing on – training harder, working better with teammates, reflecting continuously by learning from mistakes - despite challenges and setbacks.

In order to achieve these goals, everyone must be a strong believer of one of the CORRI Qualities - “Resilience”. This quality not only enables SACSS students to pick themselves up and continue to believe in themselves but it also enables students to stay committed to the training in preparation for future competitions and development of their personal best.

SACSS believes in imbuing resilience relentlessly in all students through the work done by Teachers, Instructors and CCA Leaders. It is the “Resilience” in the students and teachers that will motivate them to achieve future success. Success is ultimately defined by a combination of motivation, perseverance and the ability to review the processes and goals periodically. And none of these are possible without resilience.
