

Finish the Race

October 2019

The home stretch is always the hardest.

In this last important league of the race, many would start tapping into their hidden reservoir of energy trying to make the cut while some might lose steam after being the front runner most of the time. And then we have those who hold steady, pacing themselves according as plan, all the way to the finishing line.

What kind of "racer" we are depends on many variables, some we can control such as our belief and outlook in life. At SACSS, the one who possesses the 'Can-do' spirit is more likely to be able to create more opportunities for herself to grow and learn, and not be overtaken by the fear of failing or be caught up with comparing herself unfavourably to others because she is enthusiastic to take on any challenge that comes her way.

So as you gear up to prepare for the last battle, remember that you always have a choice. You can choose to see the positive side to everything. You can choose how to react to an unfavourable situation. You can choose to be brave and do something about it rather than nothing at all.

So, how would you like to finish this race?
